America's Water Infrastructure Act (AWIA) of 2018 requires all community water systems serving a population of 3,300 or more to assess their risk to malevolent acts and natural disasters, including developing an emergency response plans. AWIA also places increased emphasis on assessing cybersecurity vulnerabilities to utility enterprise and control systems. This workshop will provide participants with an in-depth understanding of AWIA and resources designed to facilitate compliance. Participants will also be provided with a focused review of practical cybersecurity protocols that can be applied by utility operators to enhance cyber risk management, including a review of how to use AWWA's cybersecurity guidance and assessment tool.

SPEAKERS

Kevin M. Morley, PhD, AWWA, Federal Relations Manager, has guided the development of multiple AWWA security and preparedness standards, while working closely with the USEPA, DHS and FEMA on national homeland security policy, including AWIA.

Dan Groves, West Yost, led the project to update and revise AWWA's Cybersecurity Guidance and Assessment Tool and has working closely with Idaho National Labs to advance practical solutions to improve cybersecurity in the water sector.
